Pres. Lee picks Cougs, not fan of pass/fail

By JAC CABANISS
Universe Staff Writer

President Rex E. Lee said he is opposed to pass/fail classes, particularly in making religious classes pass/fail, during a question-and-answer session on Thursday in the ELWC Memorial Lounge.

Lee, who has experience in the law school, said that people just don't take religious classes as seriously as they should.

Lee also fielded questions about his health, his opinion on Thursday's BYU-University of Utah basketball game and student eligibility to graduate in four years.

Lee said his chronic back pain is now under the best control it has ever been and his peripheral neuropathy nerve condition is OK if he walks more slowly than he is accustomed to.

"Cougars by six," President Lee said when asked to make a prediction on the basketball game. "We both have an incentive to win since we're tied in the conference," he said. "I think the battle for the WAC championship will be between us and the U."

Some students had questions pertaining to general education classes, graduation and transferring from other schools.

"There will always be a general education core," President Lee said. He said the University is currently reviewing classes to decide if changes should be made in regards to which classes should be optional and which should be required.

Officials are considering all aspects relating to graduation in an attempt to move students through faster, Lee said.

"We completely understand that there are some instances in which it is impossible to graduate in four years," he said. "Our enrollment ceiling is 27,000 students and we think the 4,500 freshmen we admit each year combined with 1,500 transfer students is about the right number to maintain a student body of 27,000," he said.

One student was concerned about Geneva Steel's role in the BYU community. Lee said although they do provide some support to the athletic program and some officials contribute to BYU, that BYU remains neutral about supporting Geneva.

He said the university accepts money from Geneva Steel but the action is not an endorsement of the company.

Lifestyles affected by cold

Weather determines fun, attitudes of Alaskan students

By JENNIFER DUKE
Universe Staff Writer

Getting stuck in the snow may sound familiar to some BYU students, but the problem takes on a deeper meaning for students attending the University of Alaska-Fairbanks. Students there go to school in waist-deep snow.

Ask Stanna Bippus, a 23-year-old theater major who attends UAF, about getting stuck in the snow. "I was following a trail to school and I just fell into the snow. It was up to my waist and I was stuck."

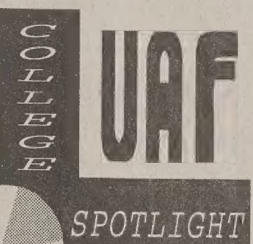

Fairbanks has received about eight feet of snow this year, said Bippus.

Keeping warm is a big concern for UAF students. The students can be found wearing wool socks, fur hats, ski bibs, long underwear, and big heavy boots.

"You don't care what you look like as long as you're warm," Bippus said.

When the weather gets "warm" at zero degrees, some interesting things happen, said Christina Tressler, a 20-year-old elementary education major attending UAF. "A group of girls wear bikinis and go down and pose for everyone at the university sign," she said.

At seven degrees, most students can be found wearing shorts and t-shirts, Tressler said.

The cold weather isn't the only problem people face. "This week has been the first time that the sun has been out in three months," Bippus said.

The darkness can cause problems emotionally for students, Bippus said. "People get really edgy. It's kind of like cabin fever, but worse. There is a real problem with suicide here," Bippus said.

Students find themselves in a reversed situation in the summer, Bippus said. "In the summer it is light 24 hours a day."

One way students entertain themselves, said Tressler, is to boil water and throw it out the window. "The water instantly crystallizes and makes a freaky noise. It's one way to stay sane," she said.

There are no weather-related problems such as collapsing roofs, Tressler said. Sometimes there is a problem with the walls at the dorms "popping," she said.

"It gets so cold that the walls move and make a popping sound," Tressler said.

The cold and snow can cause transportation problems for students and faculty. "Some students cross country ski to school and others ride their bikes, even in 30 below (zero) weather," Bippus said.

"Trying to get cars to start is the main problem we have," said Sabra Phillips, administrative assistant for the student government.

Snow removal on Sundance road works crews, equipment overtime

By ROCKY BURCH
Universe Staff Writer

The snow received Wednesday night and Thursday morning brought visions of great skiing to the minds of skiing enthusiasts, but brought more overtime hours to road crews trying to keep roads open.

Sundance received 12 inches of new snow as of 6 a.m. Thursday. Those trying to reach Sundance to go skiing were delayed because the road to Sundance was restricted to one lane traffic from Highway 189 to Sundance.

"Two or three slides covered part of the road," said Craig Haskell, UDOT District 6 maintenance supervisor. Thursday afternoon the road was still only one lane wide. Crews were working on widening the road but Haskell said they would still find it narrow in a lot of places.

UDOT used a graveyard shift Thursday night to work on further widening of the road. Eight or nine UDOT employees will work throughout the night on widening the road to Sundance, Haskell said. UDOT hopes to have the road widened out to its normal width by Friday morning.

"We're going to use two front-end loaders, one road grader and two or three dumptrucks with blades," Haskell said.

UDOT is using the front-end loaders because it allows them to manipulate the placing of the snow. In normal snow removal operations there is no ability to move the snow other than where the plows can move the snow, Haskell said. "With the loaders we can actually move the snow to the place of our choice."

Haskell said the snow will be moved to wide spots in the road, placed on the creek bank and some may have to be dumped into the creek itself.

"There aren't many wide spots left so most of the snow will go on the banks or to other locations," Haskell said. Sundance was open even though the road was restricted to one lane.

"Our business decreased about 15 to 20 percent today (Thursday)," said Forrest Lundeen, Sundance ticket salesman. The snow didn't cause too many problems in the valleys. The Alpine School District reported that most of its buses were on time. Those that weren't on time were only a few minutes behind schedule, said Lee Gillman, Alpine School District transportation director.

BYU vs. Utes for WAC basketball title

University of Utah No. 11? They haven't even played 11 half-decent teams

By KEVIN SLAGLE
JEFF CALL
Universe Editors

Utah is the 11th best basketball team in America, Bill Clinton said. Clinton, a former state legislator and Republican, said Utah is the 11th best basketball team in America, Utah's Rick Majerus is the best coach in the next of the GQ. If Utah is the best team in America, both Clinton and Majerus will win the Marathon.

This week's AP poll, the Utes climbed to No. 11. While BYU finally moved to the Top 25, at No. 30. Can you tell us there is much difference between BYU and Utah? The Utes edged the Cougars, 54-53, in Provo, on a second shot on Jan. 9. Do you know much has changed since then? George Bush was elected, for heaven's sake. And BYU is a different team. That's why the Cougars will beat Utah in the Huntsman Center on Saturday.

Since their first encounter, BYU has won 12 in a row, with guard Kurt Christensen, who is getting more playing time (and is, by the way, a former Ute). And forward Jared Miller has played his best ball as a sixth-man coming off the bench.

Plus, BYU has won ten straight WAC road games, dating back to last season. The Utes, on the other hand, lost at Colorado State on Jan. 30.

Of course, the Utes are 21-3 and 14-1 in the WAC. They've got the conference's best point guard (Jimmy Soto) and top scorer and rebounder (Josh Grant). And they did beat BYU on their home court. But who else have they played? In the words of Bryant Gumbel, we answer: Bo Diddley Tech. To be specific, they opened the season against perennial power Montana Tech. Next, they faced those pesky Sacramento State Hornets. Later, they took on the Beerdogs of Wisconsin-Milwaukee (LaVerne and Shirley's alma mater).

All BYU did was beat Arizona State, Georgia, No. 9 Oklahoma, No. 23 Memphis State in their pre-conference schedule, while losing to then-No. 1 Duke.

Sure Grant and Soto are tough, but the Cougars have played against All-American and future NBA stars Anfernee Hardaway, Grant Hill and Bobby Hurley.

So the Utes beat a bunch of stiffs, lucked out against BYU, and waltzed into the No. 11 spot. Who's kidding who?

Cougar forward Russell Larson leads the conference in field goal percentage while Miller and Gary Trost rank third and fourth, respectively. Besides, Trost is the best postman in the WAC, averaging 18.6 points and 7.1 rebounds in the last six weeks. Nick Sanderson and Kevin Nixon, in the last week, have returned to top form, adding weapons to the Cougars' offensive arsenal.

On Saturday, a revamped BYU team riding the nation's third-longest winning streak will burst Utah's bubble and beat the Utes. No Top 10 lists. And after this week, the Utes will never crack the Top 10 rankings.

10 reasons why the Utes will beat BYU Saturday in the Huntsman Center

By CLIFTON SCHMIDT
Universe Sports Editor

Finally it has arrived. The long-awaited rematch between the Cougars and the No. 11 Utes. The game has a rematch taken so much coming (at least it seems so), nor been more anticipated than such rematch as Steelers vs. Cowboys, Redskins vs. Miller and Clubber vs. Rocky Balboa.

It makes this matchup even more exciting for the lead (and pretense to determine the winner) of the Western Athletic Conference this season.

We love games like this. We're giving everything they have, blood, sweat, tears, their mothers-in-law — just to win a single game. It's the greatest.

I could give you a veritable plethora of reasons as to why the Utes will win. I will spare you, however, and once again present for your reading pleasure: The Top 10 Reasons Why Utah Will Beat BYU.

No. 10: The Utes are undefeated at home this season. This is their home finale and the final appearance in the Huntsman Center for the seniors. Their pride will shine.

No. 9: Because BYU Vice President of Student Life R. J. Snow is a traitor. The one-time vice president at the U was supposed to have swiped the Cougar's football playbook and given it to the Utes for last season's game. He knowingly gave Ron McBride a doctored book and is now on the U's Top 10 Most Wanted list.

No. 8: Because BYU center Gary Trost is scheduled to drive the team bus to Salt Lake City. That means the team won't make it because they will either be in an accident or stop to help someone who was just in one.

No. 7: Utah guard Byron Wilson is Michael Jordan.

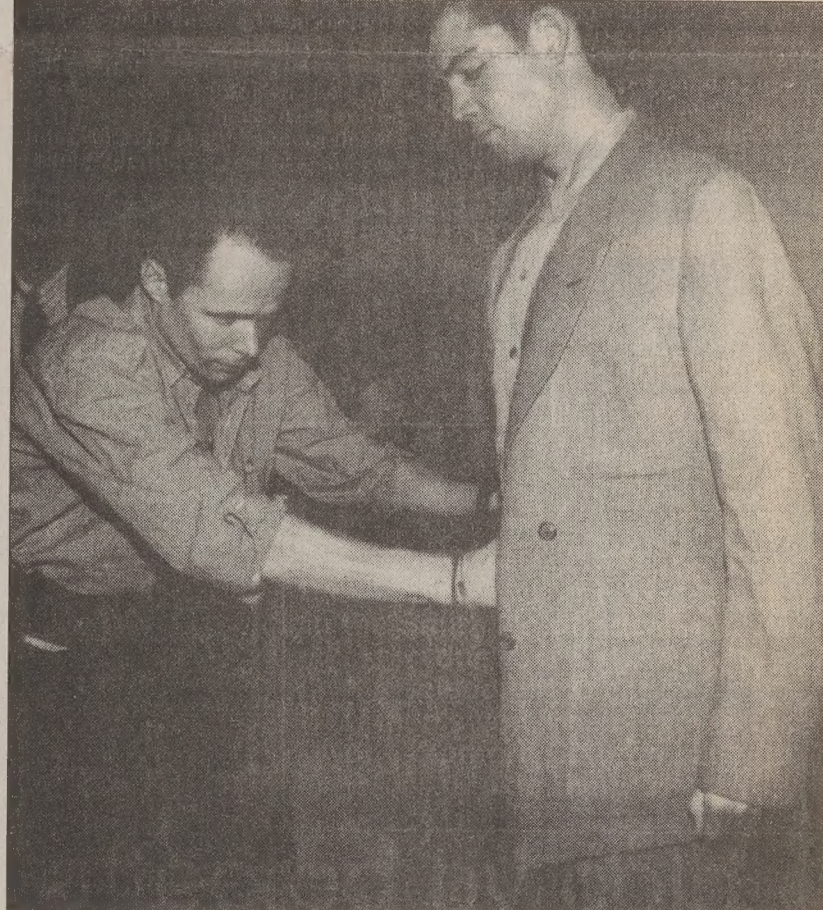

No. 6: Because that dastardly feline Cosmo didn't escape from its cage on the Y campus and pollute our beautiful snow-covered campus or infect our players like it did before the football game.

No. 5: Do I even have to mention that we already beat you once this year? So what if it was by just one point, it was at your place! And you expect to come here and win? Puleeeeeease!

No. 4: Because Jared Miller has been found out as secretly being BYU women's basketball center

Thursday, in preparation for tonight's fashion show, Michael Anderson, Alexander Julian's assistant, fit a suit to model Tony Morill. Julian, a New York designer, is this year's fashion show celebrity. The suit is part of Julian's spring 1993 menswear line.

Student fashion show stars New York stylist

New York menswear designer, Alexander Julian, will be the guest celebrity designer at the annual spring fashion show, "Exhibition A Designer Presentation," sponsored by the Department of Clothing and Textiles and the BYU Fashion Society, today in the Wilkinson Center Main Ballroom at 8 p.m.

"The fashion show allows each designer to have a mini show featuring their own original designs," said Michelle Hyde, faculty adviser. "A museum showcases the work of an artist and a fashion show showcases the work of a designer — the show will be a museum of fashion."

Julie Benson, fashion show director and a junior majoring in fashion merchandising from Crofton, Md., said the show will feature 19 student designers and faculty designer Mary Farahnakian.

"The main reason to have a fashion show is to show off the designs of BYU students," Benson said. "The fashion show also allows us to bring in people high up in the fashion industry, such as Alexander Julian, to help the designers develop their talents."

Julian is a prominent and highly-respected designer of boys and menswear. He is most recognized for his menswear collection "Colours."

BYU student designers have been working on their projects and preparing for the production since September.

"We were looking for lines with good quality and good construction," Benson said. "The designs must be professional and original."

"The guests will see many things, from traditional wedding gowns to futuristic outfits," Benson said. "The show will be a menagerie of costumes, casual wear and formal outfits."

Hyde said the student designers had to pay their own expenses, including the cost of fabric and last-minute tailoring.

"It can be very expensive for the student designers, but they hope to gain exposure, notoriety and to be critiqued," Hyde said.

Robert Parola, associate editor and sportswear editor for Fairchild Publication's Daily News Record (DNR), will be a judge along with Sue Heugley, a personal shopper for Nordstrom in Salt Lake City.

Former Miss America and BYU graduate Sharlene Wells Hawkes will be the commentator.

Opening statements made in King trial

LOS ANGELES — Two policemen transporting an injured Rodney King from one hospital to another detoured for nearly two hours, stopping at their station to show the beating victim to colleagues, a prosecutor said Thursday.

In an opening statement, Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven Clymer also accused the two defendants of trying to convince medical personnel at both hospitals that King was under the influence of the hallucinogen PCP when there was no such evidence.

The surprise allegations about Officers Laurence Powell and Timothy Wind came as the federal government launched its effort to do what state prosecutors could not — win convictions in the videotaped beating.

The defense began its opening statements with the same strategy that proved successful before, portraying the officers' actions as appropriate and within Police Department guidelines.

The previous acquittals of Powell, Wind, Koon and another white officer on most state charges ignited three days of deadly mayhem in Los Angeles. If convicted, the officers could face a maximum penalty of $250,000 in fines and 10 years in prison.

Serbs will not fire on U.S. air aid

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serb leaders ordered their troops Thursday not to shoot at U.S. planes parachuting aid to eastern Bosnia, but warned that the planned airdrop could worsen the war or impede peace talks.

In Washington, President Clinton formally announced that the U.S. military will drop food for the hungry in besieged eastern towns. The timing of the airdrops will be determined by the Defense Department and the United Nations, he said.

The food-drop operation will be the deepest American involvement yet in the war over Bosnia's secession from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

Avalanche kills man in Emigration Canyon

SALT LAKE CITY — A 29-year-old man was killed in an avalanche while skiing in Emigration Canyon about seven miles east of Salt Lake City on Thursday.

Salt Lake County sheriff's Deputy Rod Norton said the man, whose name has not been released, was an Emigration Canyon-area resident.

He was skiing in the Pinercrest-Little Mountain area when hit by the avalanche. Norton said the man was with at least three others, who went for help after rescue efforts failed. Search and rescue units were working to recover the man's body Thursday night, Norton said.

Beginning about 7 a.m. several avalanches rolled down mountainsides in Little Cottonwood Canyon about 25 miles southeast of Salt Lake City Thursday, damaging cars and burying sections of the highway up the canyon.

The slides were triggered by U.S. Forest Service and state Department of Transportation avalanche control gun crews, who fired heavy artillery shells into the mountainsides.

Californians rejoice as drought ends

SAN FRANCISCO — While Californians all over the state are drinking in the good news that the six-year drought is over, some officials have a word of caution: with 30 million people and a limited water supply, the state isn't flush enough to abandon good habits learned in the dry season.

"Conservation practices are here to stay in California. There's no question about it," said Douglas Priest, manager of the state drought center.

Priest and Maurice Roos, chief hydrologist for the state Department of Water Resources, believe a storm last weekend finished the drought. Gov. Pete Wilson formally declared it over Wednesday.

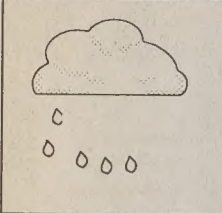

The snowstorm, the latest in a wet and wild winter, brought the water content of the Sierra Nevada snowpack to 140 percent of the April 1 average, enough to bring most reservoirs above normal when it melts, Priest said.

Some conservation measures, such as letting toilets go unflushed, will likely be eliminated quickly, Priest said.

But others, such as not letting water run during tooth-brushing, probably will survive. "We're looking at the best water-educated public that we've ever had," he said.

Editor addresses Tribune's future

By SHANNON DORMINEY
Universe Staff Writer

In an address to students and faculty at the Communications Executive Symposium Thursday, James Shelledy, editor-in-chief of the Salt Lake Tribune, said religious biases may "creep" into the newspaper's content.

"Religion is the ultimate in spin control," Shelledy said in an interview earlier that day.

If religious leaders and followers feel a news story did not give the proper angle or "spin" to a subject, someone will be upset and say the article was "anti" their cause, Shelledy said.

Articles shouldn't be looked at as anti-Mormon, but rather as taking anti-Church stands at times, he said.

Just because the article is in opposition with someone's beliefs doesn't mean it is against the institution.

"Sometimes the information is just reporting," Shelledy said.

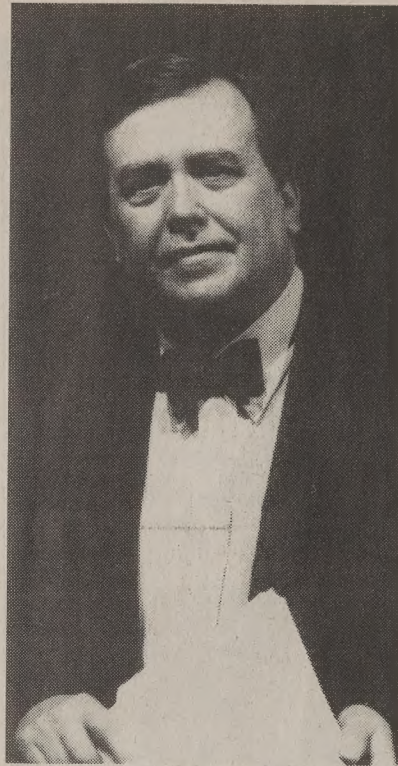

Shelledy also focused on what newspapers need to do to survive in the year 2000. The key lies in building connections with readers, he said.

"Readers' definitions of news have expanded," Shelledy said.

Newspapers must focus the content of their news on information relevant to their readers in order to retain and gain new readers, he said.

Colors, pictures and graphics make reading more fun for the reader, but if the relevant news content isn't there, people won't read the news, Shelledy said.

Good writing, enticing headlines, common sense and good judgment are necessary for a newspaper's survival.

James Shelledy, editor of the Salt Lake Tribune, listens to student comments after his address to the Communications Department Thursday.

Between now and the year 2000, newspapers must "make sense of an insensible world" for readers, he said.

Newspapers must humanize their stories and create heroes out of those individuals in the community, such as teachers, that readers can relate to.

Owner attempts rescue of impounded vehicle

By ERNEST GEIGENMILLER

Two Provo residents pled guilty to trespassing and possession of burglary tools before an Orem Circuit Court judge Thursday morning, a court spokesperson said.

Mark Kevin Murray, 26, a UVCC student, and Ken Kajiya, 23, both of 380 N. 1020 East, Provo, attempted to remove Murray's car from an Orem impound yard after it was towed from a UVCC parking lot, said Sgt. Gerald Nielsen of the Orem police department.

"The two were observed by Orem police officers in the area of the impound lot at Larry's Towing on State Street at about 1 a.m.," Nielsen said. "They were then caught driving away in another car."

Special fence-cutting tools were found in their car, Nielsen said.

According to the court report, Murray had parked his car in a restricted area at a UVCC parking lot. Campus police discovered that he owed other parking tickets, and consequently the car was impounded.

The two men were charged with city trespass and possession of burglary tools. The court spokesperson said the city trespass charge is a misdemeanor C, and possession of burglary tools is a misdemeanor B, which means a defendant could face up to six months in jail and up to $1,000 in fines.

Both pled guilty to the charges so the trespass charge was dismissed, the spokesperson said. They now have the option to pay a $50 fine or face two days in jail.

Donate food and ski free

By ASHLIE NIELSON

A can of food will be the ticket for free cross country skiing this weekend at Wasatch Mountain State Park and the Homestead.

The Homestead, located in Midway, and Wasatch Mountain State Park will co-sponsor a cross country ski promotion for charity on Saturday and Sunday. The Homestead and Wasatch Mountain State Park will give free trial passes to each person who donates a can of food or a personal care product.

The cans of food and personal care products, such as toothpaste, deodorant, soap, shaving cream, etc., will be donated to the Utah Food Bank and Traveler's Aid Society. They will then distribute the goods and products to several different organizations in need of help.

Most of the food they receive is sent to food emergency pantries, said Brenda Thompson, director of the Utah Food Bank. Families in need or homeless people can go there to get food.

The Homestead and Wasatch Mountain State Park decided to accept personal products along with canned food donations because these items are also needed at organizations.

Cougars look to even series with Stanford tonight

By JASON MICHAEL WERNER
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU men's gymnastic team will take on the Stanford Cardinal squad tonight in a meet billed as "The Battle of the West's Best." Stanford won the teams' first meeting Saturday in Palo Alto, Calif., 281.05 to 279.05.

BYU coach Mako Sakamoto said tonight's meet will be the Cougars' biggest challenge this season.

"I think we are about even teams, we will have to be perfect to beat them," Sakamoto said.

Cougar gymnast Christian Burch said the home crowd at tonight's meet may give BYU the momentum to upset the top-ranked Stanford team.

"We are pretty hyped right now, we just came off a close loss to them," Burch said.

"On our home turf we'll be more comfortable, it's easier to come together as a team when we have the crowd behind us."

Tonight's meet will feature two of the NCAA's top gymnasts as BYU's Darren Elg, the nation's best all-around gymnast, and Stanford's Jair Lynch, a 1992 Olympian, face off in the all-around competition.

Lynch won the all-around Saturday night, beating Elg by a .2 point margin.

"I think the battle will again be between Elg and Jair Lynch," Sakamoto said.

"Jair won back at Stanford because Darren missed on rings. If Darren is consistent he has a very good chance of beating Jair."

Stanford's near-perfect performance on the parallel bars last week was the Cougars' undoing.

BYU held a two point lead going into the last event, but Stanford's season-high 48.2 on the bars was enough to take the lead, and the meet.

Stanford's roster currently lists two of the nation's best on the parallel bars, Lynch and Liang Jing-Wei.

Jing-Wei was a member of BYU's team last year, but transferred to Stanford after the season ended.

Tonight's meet will start at 7 p.m. at the Smith Fieldhouse.

Tickets will be available at the door for $2 for students and faculty and $3 for the general public.

Two-for-one tickets may be purchased at the Sports Information Office, 30 SFH.

Rivalry against Utah starts early for women

By TAUNYA TERRY
Universe Sports Writer

Tonight the BYU women's basketball team starts out a big weekend of rivalry against the University of Utah at the Huntsman Center. Utah is doing everything it can to bring in a record crowd attendance for a women's basketball game.

Assistant manager of the Huntsman Center, Dave Copier, said that Utah is expecting to have between 10,000-12,000 people in attendance, breaking the record of approximately 7,000.

To bring in the crowds, Utah ticket distributors have been giving game tickets away. "We have tried to think of creative ways to distribute the tickets," Copier said.

Currently, BYU leads the WAC 11-0 and Utah is close behind with a second place 9-2 WAC record. After tonight's game, both teams still have two more WAC games this season.

BYU Sophomore guard Thais Kidd said that the team is excited to see a large crowd at the Huntsman Center. She said the team has more confidence now than it has in the past.

The Cougars made a team decision to stay the night in Salt Lake City Thursday in preparation for the game. "The team unity is so good that staying in Salt Lake will give us more time to get ready to play and talk basketball," Kidd said. The Cougars defeated Utah earlier this season 65-49 and managed to contain Utah's senior forward Mikki Kane-Barton. "We knew we had to front Mikki and make her uncomfortable," Coach Jeanie Wilson said.

Kidd said that Utah has always had the edge on BYU and that the Cougars are out to prove themselves. "We were teasing the guys' team and told them that we would go up and warm up the gym for them, so that they can go in and do what they need to do," Kidd said.

Rally clashes with New Delhi police

The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — Riot police fired tear gas and chased protesters from dawn to dusk Thursday to stop tens of thousands of Hindu militants from massing for a rally to demand the government's ouster.

At least 88 people were injured and more than 2,800 people were arrested, city police chief Mukund Behari Kaushal told reporters at his makeshift headquarters behind barricades on the Parliament grounds.

The government's success in preventing the rally was a boost for Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao, who was accused of indecisiveness in dealing with religious riots that engulfed India after Hindus tore down a Muslim mosque in December in the town of Ayodhya.

The incident sparked Hindu-Muslim riots in December and January that killed 1,940 people.

The Bharatiya Janata Party, the right-wing group that called the rally, has been gaining strength ever since, and India's multi-ethnic, multi-religious democracy is in danger.

The government deployed thousands of police officers to thwart the rally by Bharatiya Janata, which has ridden a wave of Hindu militancy to become India's biggest opposition party.

"The government is shaking with fear," said Atal Behari Vajpayee, a member of Parliament for Bharatiya Janata who was arrested.

Peace talks to continue in Middle East

The Associated Press

GENEVA — The United States and Russia will invite the Arabs and Israel to return to Middle East peace talks in April in Washington, Secretary of State Warren M. Christopher said Thursday.

His announcement came just a day after he concluded separate talks in Jerusalem with Israeli and Palestinian leaders, saying he was unable to set a date to resume negotiations.

Faisal Husseini, a key Palestinian negotiator, said that President Clinton and Christopher wrote him "a very encouraging letter" after the meeting between Christopher and the Palestinians, according to Israeli radio.

Also, Christopher talked by telephone with the Palestinians and in Geneva with Andrei Kozyrev, the Russian foreign minister. Russia maintains good relations with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Christopher "obviously heard enough new about the attitudes of the parties," an official said later when Christopher flew to Brussels for a NATO foreign ministers' meeting on Friday.

"It's a judgment that he made," said the official, who spoke to reporters on condition of anonymity.

"The very strong consensus in the Middle East is that the parties want to return to the negotiations," Christopher said at a joint news conference with Kozyrev after they met for nearly three hours.

Christopher did not say whether the Palestinians had dropped their objections to phased rather than immediate repatriation of 396 Palestinian deported to Lebanon on Dec. 17 by Israel.

In the seven Arab countries he visited, Christopher said he found strong sentiment among government leaders to reopen the negotiations.

When they recessed, Syria and Israel had begun to talk about a territorial compromise and separate Israeli-Jordanian talks were making headway, as well.

A joint statement by the United States and Russia said the negotiations would be held in Washington in April.

Because of the Jewish Passover and Christian Easter, April 19 appeared the earliest possible starting date.

Hanan Ashrawi, spokeswoman for the Palestinian negotiators, said in Jerusalem: "We are working on the points that were discussed in the meetings with Christopher. There are still pending issues. We hope to be able to resolve the outstanding issues and obstacles in time to enable us to participate."

BRIGHAM YOUNG UNIVERSITY

Wherever you go this summer, take an Independent Study course and earn university credit.

The benefit of BYU Independent Study is this: It conforms to your own pace and to your own schedule. And you can do it anywhere.

That flexibility gives you the opportunity to combine your education with your surroundings.

For instance, if you are going to be near a cultural center like New York or Los Angeles, take a humanities, English, art history, or theatre and film course.

If you are going to be around historic areas like Boston, Philadelphia, or

Washington D.C., bring along a history or political science course.

If you are working in a business environment, there are a number of courses like marketing, information management, accounting, economics and others that will make your experience more meaningful to you and your employer.

Regardless of your interest and need, taking an Independent Study course in a field environment can give you the opportunity to learn in the midst of unlimited resources and applications.

There are many courses to choose from. All of them will give you full university credit and can put you closer to graduation.

Pick up a FREE Independent Study catalog from the information desk at the Wilkinson Center, the ASB, your advisement center, or from our office at 206 Harman Building. Or, call 378-2868.

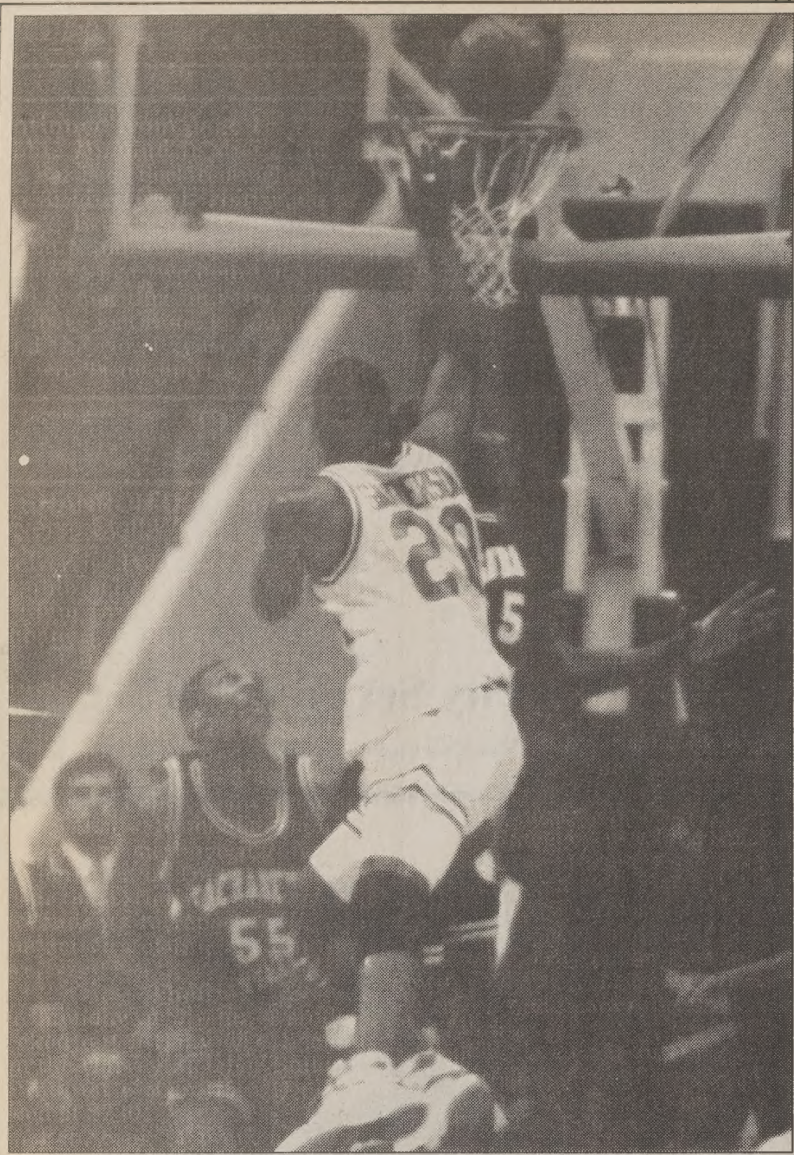

Take a course with you this summer wherever you go.

Scoring record falls; Cougs slam Hornets

By JEFF CALL
Assistant Sports Editor

Thursday night, BYU played its "feel-good" game of the year against Sacramento State. But the Cougars will be all business Saturday night at Utah in The Game of the Year.

Amid smiles, dunks and 64 percent shooting from the floor, the Cougars broke the school record for scoring, chalking up a 128-78 victory over the Hornets as coach Roger Reid started all five seniors: David Astle, Jared Miller, Kevin Nixon, Nick Sanderson and Gary Trost.

Six players scored in double figures, including Astle (15), Miller (17), Nixon (11, on three 3-pointers), Sanderson (20), Randy Reid (13) and Russell Larson (14). Every player but one got into the scoring column.

In the locker room following the win, the Cougar seniors were beaming and gushing about having the chance to play together for the last time at home.

Coach Reid, meanwhile, was more subdued. "Hopefully this game will help us for Saturday. Now we must focus for Utah," Sacramento State coach Don Newman, whose team played at Utah earlier this season, fielded the obvious question about who would win The Game. "I'm definitely not going to go against those Cougars," he said. "The arsenal they have is relentless."

BYU guard Kurt Christensen, who played at Utah in 1988-89, said, "The stage is set for a big-time game and fortunately we're the type of guys that will stick together. It's kind of like going to war and I'm glad I'm on this team."

Stars from 'Saturday's Warrior' will speak and sing at fireside

By COLETTE LINTON
Universe Staff Writer

BYU students may remember having "seen that smile somewhere before," if they attend this Sunday fireside featuring two stars from the movie "Saturday's Warrior."

Davison Cheney, who played Todd Richards, and Marianne Thompson, who played Pam Flinders, will share their message on self-worth through speech and song, telling students how to change their lives from the inside out.

Cheney, an Orem resident, recently released his first album which includes songs about self-worth.

Cheney said the fireside topic will be based on a song from the album about a man who is unhappy and tries to change everything in his life. The man finally realizes it is he who must change.

"That song was about me," Cheney said. "I remember wanting to change myself. I even tried getting a perm and painting my house. But it didn't work. Change has to come from within," he said.

Cheney said he will talk about living life, making mistakes and dealing with those mistakes.

"My English teacher at Ricks always told us to write about something we know," he said.

"I picked a fireside subject that is very much me. Change and dealing with mistakes; that's what I know about."

Cheney, a former Young Ambassador, left BYU to act professionally in Salt Lake City and later began his singing career in Nashville, Tenn., where he was awarded "outstanding performer" at Opryland USA.

Thompson currently lives in Provo where she teaches dance and assists her husband at his salon.

Although Sunday will be Thompson's first time addressing BYU students, she has spoken for numerous LDS youth groups. Thompson said she will share the same message at BYU that she shares with youth groups about understanding their self-worth.

The fireside will begin at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, in the Harris Fine Arts Center de Jong Concert Hall.

Debbie Dimond in disguise and thus has been declared ineligible.

No. 3: Josh Grant. "Nuff said."

No. 2: Because the Cougars can't win on Sunday. Should the game happen to last two hours, it will be Sunday morning and the authorities above just won't be pleased.

And the No. 1 reason why Utah will win is no matter how much

Roger Reid says he wasn't referring to Utah and Rick Majerus in his earlier comments about coaching and respect, and the Utes are convinced it was no coincidence and aren't happy.

Forget Utah by five. At the end of the game the Utah band will be heard saying "Five, 10, 15 wonderful points. Ha ha ha ha ha."
